THE LINCOLN MONUMENT.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 22, 1865. The train left harrisburg with the remains of Preside Lincoln at eleven o'clock this morning. Thousands of parsons were sad witnesses of its departure. Our com-pany was increased at the State capital by the addition Hen. Joseph Bailey, Hon. J. K. Moorhead and M. Ball Stanton, Esq. The latter gentleman is the chairman of the committee of arrangements of the Philadelph.a day councils. The duty of this gentleman is to extend the hespitalities of this city to those who have been spe cially invited to accompany the remains of the late Fre-sident to Springfield. Acting High Constable Clarke, of Philadelphia, was also on board of the train, and met a police force of six hundred on his arrival in this city. ernor Bradford, of Maryland, and staff, took leav of the party at Harrisburg.

THE CARS were heavily draped with mourning outside and within and were of the finest workmanship. The one contain ing the remains presented a more sombre hue than the ors, and was additionally designated by metallic orna

The Ancient Family of Lincoln.

In the HERALD of Friday, referring to the habiliments woe in which Broadway is at present clothed, you f a store on Broadway is a heraldic tribute to the emory of the late Chief Magistrate. The ancient arms of the family of Lincoln, set in an antique frame, orna-ments the space near one of the windows. Under the ms there is the motto, "Aperto vivere voto." The

Your reporter is perhaps not aware that the "beraldic sent, is termed a "hatchment." Such a decoration o amily story of the illustrious dead. As Abraham Lin-In will be forever illustrious in the roll c all of the deings he was entitled in the Herard's coilege of the world. It may, therefore, not be uninteresting to many of your readers if I give in detail all that I have discovered relative to the family of Lincoln, and describe briefly the arms on the hatchment already alluded to.

I trace the Lincoln family as far back as the reign of Henry VII. of England, A. D. 1455-1509. The Lincolns come from those celebiated Earls of Lincoln. 'in Nottinghamshire, beside Newark,'' of whom Collins, in his "Pecrage," says that King Henry "having fully experienced his fidelity by his demeanor, whilst he continued his prisoner, received him into his especial favor and made choice of him for one of his privy council, being a person of great prudence, gravity and constancy.' Did not the first Lincoln foreshadow the last? Frances, the daughter of the earl, married Gyles, the third Lord Chandos, who died in 1593, thereby blending the Lincoln family with the noble house of Bedford. The peerage of Lincoln has long become extinct; and, strangely enough, in turning over Burke's "Landed Gentry of England," I find that there is no rich landed proprietor of the soil of the name of Lincoln in England at the present day. The Lincoln came to this country, as far as I can trace, about the year 1642, and various members of the family have distinguished themselves in different eras of American bistory. The family arms of the Lincolns, described in heraldic technology, are argent on a cross vert, an estole pierced, gold; crest, a lion rampant sable, ducally gorged. The arms of the Todd family—or of that family of Todds to which I trace Mrs. Lincoln to belong, descended from the Todds of Swanland, in Yorkshire—are argent within a berdure vert, three foxes' heads couped, gules. The motto, Aperto vivere voto—"to live without a wish concealed"—coincides curiously and happily enough with the frank, avowed, undisguised character of our late Chief Magistrate.

A hachment, corrupted from "achievement," is a a wish concessed"—coincides curiously and happily enough with the frank, avowed, undisguised character of our late Chief Magistrate.

A hachment, cerrupted from "achievement," is a square piece of braid, framed, and placed in diamond fashion on the front of a house. On it are painted the armorral bearings whereby may be known the relationship of the deceased person. The whole distinguished in such a manner that the beholders can at once decide whether the arms are those of a bachelor or of a married person. Thus, on the hatchment in front of my premises the left side of the shield, looking at it from the street, is the arms of the Lincolns; the right side, looking from the street, gives the arms of the Todd family, though the male portion is on the dexter and the female on the sinister side of the shield. An impuled line in the middle divides the two portions; and the dexter side of the shield being in mourning, denotes that it is the male of the family who has departed. Had Mr. Lincoln been the last of his family beraldry would have demanded that a death's head should be placed in the middle of the escutcheon to signify that death had conquered all.

In the loope that these few facts may be interesting at this momentous period of our history, I send them to the Hexald. Yours truly,

THE CATAPALQUE.

The canopy, or catafulque, now in the City Hall, where it is proposed the remains shall lie in state, is almost completed. There is a solemn grandeur about the appearance of this structure and the manner in which the portion of the City Hall in which it is erected is draped, which accords well with the solemnity of the occasion or which it is to be honored as the receptacle of the remains of the late beloved Chief Magistrate of the United States, Abraham Lincoin. The light in the portion of the edifice in which the remains are located is considerably dimmed, and the black drapery of the catafulque and the building creates a feeling of impressive solemnity which is not without considerable effect. The front of the canopy presents the appearance of a dark square, on which rests in which the remains are located is considerably dimmed, and the black drapery of the catofulque and the building creates a feeling of impressive solemnity which is not without considerable effect. The front of the canopy presents the appearance of a dark square, on which rests an elliptical gothic arch extending across the whole width of the square or paralellogram at the base of the arch. The dimensions of this can be conceived by the statement of its height from the peak of the arch to the base of the structure, which is twenty feet. The width is ten feet and the depth is twelve feet. The exterior adornments are plain, elegant and proper. The summit or peak of the arch is topped by an eagle, in silver, which slightly relieves the sombre aspect of all. The wings are folded, the head or beak slightly drooped. In the centre, under the eagle, is a bust of Mr. Lincoln, also in silver. These, with a number of stars and a margin of silver fringes and tassels placed on a ground of fine black cloth and velvet, which covers the entire receptacle, conveys a clear idea, bearing in mind the dimensions already given, of the exterior appearance of the catofulque. The base of the arch of the canopy is done in fine cloth, honey-combed. The two sides of the canopy are adorned with two urns covered with black cloth. The drapery in front of the arch, inside, is lined with white silk of superfine texture. Inside the catofulque the black is unrelieved, save by the dots of silver stars here and there through the surface, and four marble statues underneath, standing at the four angles, being busts of Washington, Webster, Jackson and Clay. The micror covering is in the inevitable black cloth and velvet, the canopy overhead being lined with fluted cloth, radiating in folds from the middle to the sides. The rest is all plain black cloth or black velvet. The two pillars of the city Hall, standing on each side of the catafulque; are so close to it that they appear at first sight as part of it. The are wrapped in the national colors, hea

Sity Hall. By order of
Brigadier General WM. HALL, Grand Marshal.

By no means the least important part of the procession rill be the car on which the remains of the illustrious lead are to be borne, as showing the respect and symouthy as well as the taste and liberality of our citizens The car will be fourteen feet long at its longest part, eight feet wide and fifteen feet one inch in beight. On he main platform, which is five feet from the ground, will be erected a dais six inches in height, at the corner of which will be columns holding a canopy, which, curv-ing upwards towards the centre, is surmounted by a intere temple of liberty.

The platform will be entirely covered with fine black oth, drawn tightly over the body of the car, and reach ing to within a few inches of the ground, and edge with silver builton fringe. Over this will hang graceful fostooms of the same material, spangied with silver stars and edged also with silver builton. At the base of each column will be three American flags, slightly inclined escaped and covered with enga, the columns will be black but entirely covered with vines of mystle and excellent. mony will be of black cloth, drawn tightly, and lion. At each corner of the canopy there will be a plume of black and white feathers. arich plume of black and white feathers.

The temple of liberty is to be represented as being deserted, having no emblems of any kind in or around it save a small flag on top, at half-mast. The inside of the car will be lined with white satin, fluted, and from the centre of the roof will be suspended a large eagle, with outspread wings, bearing in its talons a laured wreath, and the platform around the coffin will be stream with laurel wreaths and flowers of various kinds.

The car will be drawn by sixteen gray homes, with coverings of black cloth trimmed with sliver builtion, each led by a colored groom, who will be dressed in the usual habiliments of mourning.

This will doubtless be worthy of the occasion and our metropolis, and reflect great credit on all immediately connected with its construction. It was designed by Mr. Charles Mettam, of this city, and is being prepared under the supervision of Mr. P. Relyea, undertaker.
